"From birth to death, from Monday to Monday, from morning to evening—all activities are routinized, and prefabricated. How should a man caught in this net of routine not forget that he is a man, a unique individual, one who is given only this one chance of living, with hopes and disappointments, with sorrow and fear, with the longing for love and the dread of the nothing and of separateness."

. . . the belief of idealism, high aspirations and deep convictions are not incompatible but the most practical and efficient of programs. That there is no basic inconsistency between ideals and realistic possibilities. No seperation between the deepest desires of heart and of mind and the rational application of human effort to human problems.

. . . to adhere to standards, to idealism, to vision in the face of immediate dangers takes great courage and takes self-confidence. But we also know that only those who dare to fail greatly can ever achieve greatly. It is this new idealism which is also, I believe, the common heritage of a generation. Which is learn that efficiency can lead to the camp at Auschwitz or the streets of Budapest, only the ideals of humanity and love can climb the hills of the Acropolis.

Therefore, in his teaching the superior man guides his students but does not pull them along; he urges them to go forward and does not suppress them; he opens the way, but does not take them to the place. Guiding without pulling makes the process of learning gentle; urging without suppressing makes the process of learning easy; and opening the way without leading the students to the place makes them think for themselves.

—Confucius

At this stage of life, I cannot be mere flesh. I cannot be part of the corruptible phase of man's organism. I am a living spirit of an idea—the idea of a New Africa. I am a living spirit of an ideal—the ideal of man's humanity to man. I am a living spirit of an ideology—the ideology of the effacement of man's inhumanity to man.

"It was hard to understand, and all I knew was that you had to run, run, run, without knowing why you were running, but on you went through fields you didn't understand and into woods that made you afraid, over hills without knowing you'd been up and down, and shooting across streams that would have cut the heart out of you had you fallen into them. And the winning post was no end to it, even though crowds might be cheering you in, because on you had to go before you got your breath back, and the only time you stopped really was when you tripped over a tree trunk and broke your neck or fell into a disused well and stayed dead in the darkness forever. So I thought they aren't going to get me on this racing lark, this running and trying to win, this jog-trotting for a bit of blue ribbon, because it's not the way to go on at all, though they swear blind that it is. You should think about nobody and go your own way, not on a course marked out for you by people holding mugs of water and bottles of iodine in case you fall and cut yourself so that they can pick you up—even if you want to stay where you are—and get you moving again."

Alan Sillitoe

Although, we don't know you as well as some others we think you are swell. Good luck, from Clarke

Peter,
I enjoyed taking all the chemistry labs with you, even though I usually had better fun than I did in physics.
Good luck in physics.
